

Mustafa Akıncıođlu worked at University of Oxford, Department of Education in the capacity of a Researcher between 2014 and 2018, where he was also involved in the design and delivery of EMI courses offered by the Department. He continues his research on EMI as an Associate Researcher of the Oxford EMI Research Centre, while his research interests include critical discourse analysis, learner autonomy and learner motivation within EAP Contexts, EAP Program and academic subject department collaboration development. Mustafa has also recently undertaken the role of Research, Product Development and Higher Education Manager at Cambridge University Press.